(Table showing the performance of Egyptian sovereign sukuk on 21/08/2026)

Egyptian sovereign international Sukuk came under selling pressure during last week's trading sessions, reflected in a notable decline in Sukuk prices and an increase in their yields, as shown in the table above. This performance came amid the impact of global fixed-income markets from economic and monetary developments in the United States.

In this context, preliminary data from the Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI), released on Friday,(21/08/2026) , by S&P Global Market Intelligence for August 2026, showed that the Composite (PMI)[3], rose to 56.0 points, compared with 54.6 points in July 2026, marking its highest level since April 2022.

These data indicate continued strength in U.S. economic activity, supporting expectations that interest rates will remain at elevated levels for a longer period. This, in turn, was reflected in bond markets through higher yields, particularly on longer-dated U.S. Treasury securities. These developments also extended to global fixed-income markets, as higher U.S. benchmark yields increased the required yields on comparable debt instruments, including sovereign international Sukuk, contributing to a decline in their prices and an increase in their yields.
